EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

As we approach the final stretch towards the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, the urgency to accelerate the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) has never been more critical. While progress has been made since 2015, persistent challenges continue to hinder equitable and sustainable development at local, national, and global levels. This Newsletter captures the innovative solutions and strategies collaboratively identified by Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) and key stakeholders to leapfrog SDG implementation in the remaining years.

Under the theme “Solutions to Leapfrog SDG Implementation in the Last Stretch to 2030,” the multi-stakeholder conference held at PrideInn Paradise, Mombasa County, from 9th to 11th December 2024, brought together representatives from counties across Kenya—including Turkana, Makueni, Narok, Embu, Taita Taveta, Kwale, Kitui, Wajir, Nyandarua, Mombasa, Homabay, Samburu, and Nairobi—as well as international participants from Uganda and Finland. Key organizations in attendance included the State Department for Economic Planning, Media Council of Kenya, the Private Sector, The Kenya National Bureau of Statistics (KNBS), UNDP, UN Resident Coordinator’s Office, Kenya Parliamentary Caucus on SDGs, The Council of Governors; among others.

A recurring theme throughout the three-day discussions was the importance of localizing the SDGs to national and community contexts. Drawing on best practices from Finland and Uganda, participants emphasized the need to adapt global frameworks to local realities. Voluntary Local Reviews (VLRs) emerged as a critical tool for aligning national policies with grassroots efforts, ensuring that communities are active contributors and direct beneficiaries of SDG progress. Strengthening local government engagement and empowering communities to drive development efforts will be essential in overcoming the challenges ahead.

I extend my sincere appreciation to the Inter-Agency Technical Working Group (IATWC) for their meticulous planning and coordination, which ensured the success of this crucial conference. Their leadership in fostering multi-stakeholders' collaboration has been instrumental in driving meaningful dialogue and action-oriented outcomes. We not only reflect the key insights shared during the conference but also serve as a call to action for all stakeholders to intensify their efforts in achieving the SDGs. The next few years are critical, and by working together, we can turn commitments into tangible progress, ensuring a sustainable and equitable future for all.

INTRODUCTION

As the world enters the final stretch towards achieving the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, the need for bold, transformative action has never been greater. The 2024 Annual National Multi-Stakeholder Conference on SDGs, held under the theme “Solutions to Leapfrog SDG Implementation in the Last Stretch to 2030,” provided a crucial platform for dialogue, collaboration, and innovative thinking.

Bringing together civil society organizations (CSOs), government agencies, development partners, and other key stakeholders, the conference focused on identifying and scaling up high-impact solutions that can fast-track progress across the SDGs. With time running out, the discussions emphasized the importance of localizing the SDGs, leveraging multi-sector partnerships, and adopting data-driven, inclusive policies to ensure that no one is left behind.

This Newsletter highlights the key insights, strategies, and commitments that emerged from the conference, offering a roadmap for accelerating SDG implementation in the critical years ahead.

BACKGROUND

Since 2018, the SDGs Kenya Forum has been at the forefront of championing sustainable development through the Annual SDGs Multi-Stakeholders Conference and SDGs Gala Awards. This flagship initiative has become a cornerstone for fostering dialogue, collaboration, and recognition of exceptional efforts toward achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) in Kenya. What started as a platform to unite diverse stakeholders—including government, civil society, the private sector, and development partners—has evolved into a highly anticipated event on Kenya’s sustainable development calendar. Each year, the conference sparks critical discussions on SDG implementation, while the SDGs Gala Awards honor individuals and organizations that have demonstrated outstanding commitment to the 2030 Agenda.

The event serves as a hub for sharing best practices, innovative solutions, and success stories, while also strengthening partnerships and promoting accountability. By celebrating progress and inspiring action, the Annual SDGs Multi-Stakeholders Conference and SDGs Gala Awards continue to highlight the transformative power of collective action in advancing sustainable development.

KEY SPEECHES

Mr. Al Kags, SDGs Kenya Forum Board Member and Founder of the Open Institute:

As we reflect on the world around us, we acknowledge that the past few years have not been easy. Conflicts, growing inequalities, and pandemics have tested our resolve. Yet, despite these challenges, we have witnessed the strength of partnerships, the resilience of communities, and the unlocking of possibilities in the toughest of times. With just six years left to achieve the SDGs, we cannot afford to move slowly. There is no time for business as usual. Now is the time for bold solutions and bold thinking. This year's theme calls on us to be courageous. It challenges us to embrace technology in order to disrupt traditional ways of thinking, bridge gaps, and mobilize resources to accelerate progress. It also reminds us that we must leave no one behind. We must ensure that all hands are on deck, working together to find collective solutions.

Arnold Gekonge: Executive Director of the Champions for SDGs Youth

As we gather here today, I am reminded of an important question: What is the good of experience if we do not reflect? Reflection allows us to understand our journey, recognize our successes, learn from our challenges, and prepare ourselves for the future. As we reflect on the past year, I feel both a sense of pride and urgency. We have achieved much, but there is still so much work to be done. The progress we've made in implementing the SDGs has been inspiring, but it has not come without challenges. Together, we have navigated hurdles, learned valuable lessons, and now, as we look ahead, we have an opportunity to make critical recommendations for the years to come.

Festus Wangwe: Director of SDGs at the State Department for Economic Planning

It was a great honor to be here today as we gather to celebrate the collective efforts towards achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and reflect on the progress we have made thus far. This forum provides an invaluable opportunity for us to track and report on the progress of our shared commitment to a better, more sustainable future for all. As we stand here today, it's important to pause and share some highlights of what has been accomplished on the SDGs. From improvements in education and health to advances in gender equality and environmental sustainability, we have seen significant strides in a number of areas. These achievements are a testament to the dedication, hard work, and collaboration of governments, civil society, and the private sector alike. While we still have much work ahead of us, these successes are worth celebrating and should serve as a source of motivation to continue pushing forward.

Morris Owaka - KENYA PRIVATE SECTOR ALLIANCE

While progress has been made, we have also seen areas where we have fallen short. This is not a time to rest on our laurels but rather to critically evaluate together a diverse set of actors, KEPSA is actively fostering partnerships that will drive SDG implementation across sectors and at scale. As we reflect on our journey toward achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), we recognize that we are at a critical juncture. The past years have taught us valuable lessons, and as we look toward the remaining time to 2030, it is clear that our approach must be strategic, innovative, and collaborative.

Hon. Clive Gisairo - MP, Kitutu Masaba:

Imagine if you were told you only had four years left to achieve your personal life goals. What would you do? How would you prioritize your time and efforts? What actions would you take immediately to make sure that your life's purpose was realized before it was too late? Now, think of the SDGs in the same light. We have six years left to realize these global goals. If we were to approach the SDGs with the same urgency and determination as if our very future depended on it—because it does—imagine the impact, we could have. Everyday counts.

Julius Chokera - UN Resident Coordinators Office

At the Summit of the Future held in September 2024, world leaders adopted the Pact for the Future, which includes important annexes such as the Global Digital Compact and the Declaration on Future Generations. This agreement represents the culmination of years of inclusive dialogue and collaboration aimed at modernizing international cooperation and governance to better address contemporary global challenges

Eunice Fedha: (On Behalf on Mary Mwiti) Council of Governors:

By focusing on the early stages of a child’s development, we lay a strong foundation for lifelong learning, health, and well-being. It is inspiring to see that more and more counties are embracing the importance of early childhood education and integrating it into their development plans. This, without a doubt, contributes to the achievement of SDG 4: Quality Education. It is vital that we document good practices across counties and regions. Sharing successful strategies and initiatives is key to ensuring that we are learning from one another and scaling up what works. When we document and showcase innovative solutions, we not only celebrate achievements, but we also create a roadmap for others to follow.

Timothy Gakuo - Treasury Economic Planning Secretary

This gathering is a vital opportunity for us to acknowledge the collective efforts of all the stakeholders who have been instrumental in driving SDG progress across the country and beyond. Your commitment, dedication, and hard work are what bring us closer to realizing a sustainable, inclusive, and prosperous future for all. As we take stock of where we stand, it is important to recognize the different categories of progress we are seeing in relation to the SDGs. We've heard discussions around regressive, progressive, and stalled indicators, and this is a reality we must confront.

Catalyzing Progress: Insights from the 2024 Annual National Multi-Stakeholder Conference on SDGs

“Solutions to Leapfrog SDGs Implementation in the last Stretch to 2030”

Accelerating SDG Progress: Kenya’s Commitment to Inclusive Development

The adoption of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development in 2015 marked a new era in global development, with 193 UN Member States committing to the 17 SDGs as a roadmap for people, planet, and prosperity. Rooted in the Leave No One Behind (LNOB) principle, the SDGs aim to end poverty, reduce inequalities, and promote sustainable development.

Currently at the midway point, progress remains uneven, with the UN SDGs Report 2024 showing that only 17% of targets are on track, while 50% lag behind and 30% have stalled or regressed—particularly on poverty, hunger, and climate action. Growing inequalities, the climate crisis, and geopolitical tensions further threaten SDG implementation, exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Kenya has actively tracked progress through three Voluntary National Reviews (VNRs) and 22 Voluntary Local Reviews (VLRs), alongside annual SDG status reports. The Inter-Agency Technical Working Sub-Committee on SDGs (IATWSC), established in 2016, has played a key role in fostering multi-stakeholder engagement, policy alignment, and public awareness.

Building on past successes, the State Department for Economic Planning (SDEP), in collaboration with the IATWSC and APC-Colombia, hosted the 2024 Annual National SDGs Multi-Stakeholder Conference in Mombasa under the theme "Solutions to Leapfrog SDGs Implementation in the Last Stretch to 2030." The conference fostered a dialogue, strengthened partnerships, shared outcomes from the Summit of the Future, and culminated in the 2024 SDGs Awards, celebrating outstanding contributions to SDG progress.

MULTISTAKEHOLDER APPROACH

Achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) requires a multi-stakeholder approach that fosters collaboration across government agencies, civil society organizations (CSOs), private sector partners, academia, and local communities. Kenya has embraced this model by integrating SDGs into national policies and programs through inclusive participation, ensuring that no one is left behind.

The Inter-Agency Technical Working Sub-Committee on SDGs (IATWSC), established in 2016, alongside the SDGs Stakeholder Engagement Framework of 2020, drives Kenya's multi-stakeholder engagement approach. This framework provides a structured mechanism for cross-sectoral coordination, policy alignment, and collective action toward SDG implementation.

Kenya's multi-stakeholder engagement model has been instrumental in advancing SDG implementation. By aligning diverse perspectives and resources, Kenya is creating an enabling environment for sustainable development—making inclusion the norm. This conference served as a catalyst for renewed action and commitment as the country enters the final stretch towards 2030.

CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

The conference facilitated high-level multi-stakeholder dialogues, bringing together representatives from government agencies, civil society organizations, the private sector, academia, and international partners. These discussions focused on identifying innovative solutions to accelerate SDG implementation in the last stretch to 2030. Key insights were shared on effective policy frameworks, resource mobilization strategies, and the role of local actors in driving SDG progress.

A notable highlight of the conference was the SDGs Awards, which recognized and celebrated stakeholders for their outstanding contributions to SDG implementation. The awards underscored the power of recognition in galvanizing collective action, inspiring individuals and organizations to strengthen their commitment to sustainable development. By showcasing impactful initiatives, the awards encouraged the replication and scaling of best practices across various sectors.

PANEL DISCUSSION

1. CSOs Approach to SDGs Implementation, Monitoring and Review:

During a recent panel discussion, Makueni County was highlighted as a model for localizing the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) through the Leave No One Behind framework. With the support of the SDG Kenya Forum, Community-Based Organizations (CBOs) have successfully engaged the community in understanding and adapting the SDGs to their local context. Initially, the SDGs felt distant and abstract to many, but through public participation and translating the goals into the local language, the conversation has transformed. Community members are now actively involved in shaping their County Integrated Development Plans (CIDPs), ensuring that marginalized groups are included and that the SDGs are both relatable and actionable at the grassroots level.

Gender equality has been a central focus of these initiatives. The Leave No One Behind framework inherently aligns with gender principles by emphasizing the inclusion of all groups, especially those traditionally excluded. For example, Help Age has worked to ensure that women, particularly elderly women, take on leadership roles in projects such as nurseries. This has challenged gender norms and created new opportunities for women to become champions of change in their communities. By empowering women and youth to lead, these initiatives are making gender equality a lived reality rather than just a principle. Additionally, the integration of gender-responsive budgeting and planning into the county government's CIDPs has been critical in ensuring that gender issues remain central to the development process.

To further simplify communication around the Gender Equality Fund (GEF) commitments, Polycom Girls developed an innovative comic book. This resource breaks down complex concepts into engaging and accessible content, helping more people understand their roles in advancing gender equality. These efforts collectively demonstrate how localized approaches, inclusive participation, and creative communication can drive meaningful progress toward the SDGs.

2. LEVERAGING ON INCLUSIVE DATA FOR COMPREHENSIVE MEASUREMENT OF SDGs: STRATEGIES, OPPORTUNITIES AND CHALLENGES

During this session, it was noted that engaging the community throughout the entire process is crucial—from identifying key data points to be collected to shaping the methods of data collection. Public participation ensures that the data gathered truly reflects the real needs and priorities of the community, fostering inclusivity and accuracy in decision-making.

Data plays a pivotal role in assessing whether resources and policies are effectively reaching the grassroots level and creating meaningful impact. By leveraging data, stakeholders can identify gaps, monitor progress, and refine strategies to address challenges such as food loss and enhance food security at the local level. To ensure robust data validation on Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), several strategies can be implemented, particularly by fostering collaboration among Civil Society Organizations (CSOs), county governments, and national bodies. This collaborative approach strengthens accountability, enhances data reliability, and drives more targeted and impactful interventions.

Here are some strategies to enhance the integrity and impact of data reporting and ensure the SDGs are implemented effectively:

- ✔ Use technology tools like dashboards and digital platforms to share data transparently and allow for real-time validation and feedback from various stakeholders, including local communities, county governments, and national bodies.
- ✔ Use indicators that are locally relevant but also align with global SDG targets to facilitate comparison and reporting.
- ✔ Push for increased transparency in SDG implementation at the national level by advocating for open data policies.

KEY MESSAGES

UNDP's Role in SDGs Under Agenda 2030

- ✔ Integrator for SDGs: UNDP (United Nations Development Programme) plays a key role in integrating the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) into national and local policies and programs, helping countries align their development plans with the global Agenda 2030.
- ✔ Support for Member States: UNDP assists member states in domesticating and localizing the SDGs, ensuring that global goals are adapted to local contexts, priorities, and realities. This involves providing technical assistance, policy guidance, and capacity-building to help countries implement and track progress on SDG targets.

WAY FORWARD

As we approach the final stretch toward 2030, strengthening multi-stakeholder partnerships will be essential in scaling successful initiatives and fostering an inclusive development agenda. Moving forward, there is a need to enhance public awareness and engagement, ensuring that more organizations, youth groups, and local governments are actively involved in SDG acceleration. To uphold the transparency and credibility of the SDGs Awards, continuous improvement in the evaluation and selection process is critical. Establishing clear, data-driven metrics and expanding the diversity of the judging panel will help maintain the awards' integrity while recognizing high-impact initiatives. Additionally, creating a follow-up mechanism to track the progress of past winners can enhance accountability and showcase the long-term impact of recognized efforts. By reinforcing these principles, the SDGs Awards will remain a cornerstone of Kenya's sustainable development journey, driving momentum towards achieving the 2030 Agenda.

CLOSING REMARKS

In wrapping up the conference, Mr. George Awalla emphasized the significance of Voluntary Local Reviews (VLRs) in showcasing the importance of both centralized and localized approaches to SDG implementation. The experiences shared by countries like Finland and Uganda demonstrated how crucial it was to adapt global frameworks to local contexts and how vital it was to learn from diverse approaches moving forward.

Collaboration was not just a theme of the discussions—it was an absolute necessity. The realization of the SDGs depended on all sectors coming together, working hand-in-hand, and leveraging each other's strengths. Whether through public-private partnerships, cross-sectoral cooperation, or multi-stakeholder engagements, participants were urged to commit to working collaboratively to drive the transformation required.

CONCLUSION

As the gathering came to a close, heartfelt gratitude was expressed to each and every participant who contributed to making the event a success. Their active participation, insights, and dedication to advancing the SDGs were invaluable, and appreciation was extended for the energy and commitment they brought to the discussions.

The deliberations began with insightful opening remarks, and throughout the conference, multi-stakeholder participants emphasized that every sector played a critical role in achieving the SDGs. From government to civil society, the private sector, and local communities, the importance of collaborative action was evident. It was through this collective effort that tangible progress toward a sustainable and inclusive future could be made.

The discussions highlighted that SDG implementation was a shared responsibility. Every individual, organization, and sector needed to play their part in steering the nation toward SDG achievement. This was not just a government responsibility—it was a call to action for all.

A key theme that emerged was the critical need for effective SDG alignment across different sectors. Participants explored how policies, programs, and investments had to be strategically aligned to ensure that resources and efforts were directed toward the most impactful areas. This alignment was crucial for optimizing the impact of collective efforts.

Strengthening the implementation of the SDGs in Kenya presents a valuable opportunity for fruitful collaboration among various stakeholders. By aligning these goals with the national development agenda, particularly the Big Four Agenda, BETA and Vision 2030, Kenya can make significant strides toward sustainable and inclusive growth, ultimately benefiting all citizens.

TO ALL PARTICIPANTS

As we conclude, we extend my heartfelt gratitude to each of you for your valuable contributions, insights, and dedication to the SDGs. Your engagement reflects the collective commitment needed to accelerate progress toward our shared goals. The ideas and strategies exchanged here today will serve as a strong foundation for turning commitments into tangible actions.

A special thank you goes to our partners, organizers, and all stakeholders who made this gathering possible. Your unwavering support, collaboration, and leadership continue to be instrumental in driving the SDG agenda forward. As we move ahead, let us carry forward this momentum, strengthen our partnerships, and work together to create a more sustainable and inclusive future.

Thank you, and let's keep pushing for action!

CHALLENGES

The implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) faces several significant challenges. These obstacles can slow progress and create barriers to achieving the 2030 agenda. Limited funding, political instability, and lack of coordination among stakeholders further complicate efforts. Additionally, gaps in data and monitoring make it difficult to track progress effectively. If these challenges are not addressed, they could undermine the collective mission of realizing a sustainable and inclusive future for all.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Collaboration Among Stakeholders: Strengthening partnerships among government, civil society, private sector, and local communities can enhance resource mobilization and ensure that diverse perspectives are included in SDG initiatives. Collaborative efforts can leverage expertise and funding, creating synergies that drive impactful outcomes.
Alignment with National Development Agenda: The SDGs are closely linked to Kenya's national development agenda, particularly the Big Four Agenda and Vision 2030. By integrating SDG targets into national policies and strategies, the government can ensure that development efforts are coherent and focused on sustainable outcomes.
Enhanced Data Collection and Monitoring: Investing in robust data systems will improve the capacity to track progress and make informed decisions. This will also facilitate transparency and accountability, helping to build trust among stakeholders.
Youth Engagement and Empowerment: Actively involving young people in the implementation process can foster innovation and ensure that their needs are addressed. Youth-led initiatives can drive community-based solutions and enhance the overall effectiveness of SDG programs.
Investment in Sustainable Solutions: Encouraging investments in green technologies and sustainable practices can address environmental challenges while creating jobs and economic opportunities. This dual focus can help meet both immediate needs and long-term sustainability goals.
